AS-Schneider: Website with new content and design

Preserving values through change

Nordheim (Germany) – June 30, 2015 – The industrial valve manufacturer AS-Schneider continues to implement its corporate values of innovation culture, customer orientation and international networking – now with a new website. The technically complex revamped website in a new design and with new content appeared end of June.

If you want to seek new paths, you must leave the old ones - AS-Schneider has adhered to this adage. The revamped, better and user-friendly website now has a new design and offers current and new information about the company and the portfolio of products and services. In addition, the use has been optimised and simplified. As an information portal, the new website offers customers and potential new customers to the company the opportunity to gain an overview of the product range. Distinct structures and a clear display are among the new innovations. There is also a host of new features as well as a clear navigation area where users can quickly find their way around.

Customer satisfaction is a top priority at AS-Schneider and we are constantly working on improvements to the company in order to be able to best meet the customers' wishes. "Values can only be preserved through change" according to CEO Rolf Kummer on the concept for the company.

A visit to the new AS-Schneider website is worthwhile:
